A BEACON IN THE NIGHT

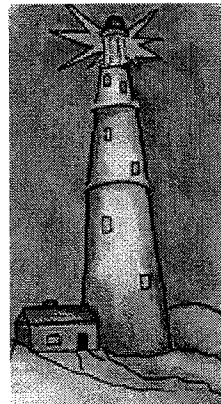

The lighthouse doesn't go out and snatch drowning sailors from the sea. It doesn't send out lifeboats to sinking ships. It doesn't shout out warning. But, more sailors owe their lives to the lighthouse than to all the massive rescue operations ever launched.

The lighthouse just stands there – night, after night, year after year – quietly beaming its. Steady, dependable light through storm and fair weather. Sailors see its light and change directions, adjust their course, avoid hazards, and steer toward safe harbor.

Some people are lighthouses in our lives—the parent or grandparents who faithfully attend worship, the friend who “just says no” to peer pressure, the willing servant who is always there to help, the boss with uncompromising integrity, the caring stranger who gives and unexpected kindness. They tower like bright beacons along a rocky coast.

Thank God for brave rescuers, but the many grateful sailors who owe their lives to the quiet, faithful service of the lighthouse will attest that preventing disaster is the surest rescue. Like the comforting presence of the lighthouse to sailors navigating the rocky shoals, the “Light of the World” even more powerfully provides guidance, hope and rescue – for guaranteed safe passage.

*“Send forth your light and your truth, Let them guide me”
(Psalm 43:3 NIV)*
